Cindi Gibson Joins Ameris Bank as Senior Vice President of Digital and Robotics Technology

ATLANTA, GA – Ameris Bank Chief Innovation Officer Ross Creasy announces that Cindi Gibson has joined Ameris Bank as senior vice president of digital and robotics technology. Gibson will be responsible for continuing to advance our digital capabilities and driving further robotics and process automation across the bank.

With over 19 years of experience, Gibson is an expert in the business technology sphere. She previously worked for Truist as a software engineering director in capital markets technology, and before that was with SunTrust in a variety of leadership roles, including delivery manager for consumer products. Prior to SunTrust, Gibson worked with New Technology Solutions Group, Harland Financial Solutions and Texas Instruments.

“Cindi is an excellent technology professional who understands what it takes to deliver seamless digital experiences to our customers so that they can bank with ease from anywhere,” says Ameris Bank Chief Innovation Officer Ross Creasy. “Her extensive background and immense knowledge will help us continue to enhance, expand and scale our technology and processes to better serve our customers.”

Gibson graduated from Auburn University with a degree in computer science and a minor in business. Gibson is an avid reader, enjoys cross-country road trips and is a loyal supporter of the Auburn Tigers and Atlanta Braves.

“I am thrilled to join the Ameris Bank team, specifically in the technology group,” says Gibson. “My goal is to provide solutions that will delight the customer, as well as provide leadership that enables Ameris to fulfill its commitment to teammates, customers and investors.”
